Warming shelter agreement

Facility at Salvation Army site to re-open Saturday

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Negotiations for using the Salvation Army Madison Center at Main and Walnut as a nightly warming shelter for the area's homeless will come full circle Saturday with the scheduled re-opening of the shelter if temperatures drop to 32 degrees or lower by 5 p.m.

With high winds, showers and overnight lows in the teens forecast for Saturday night and even colder temperatures expected Sunday and Monday, the re-opening could prove life-saving for the homeless who have nowhere else to go.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, local Salvation Army Lts. Justin and Stephanie Hartley and Salvation Army officials in Indianapolis and Chicago have all signed off on an agreement in which the city collects donations to fund the shelter and provides volunteers to oversee the warming shelter at levels consistent with the staff of Salvation Army homeless shelters in other cities.

"The re-opening of the warming shelter was made possible through a collaboration of city officials, River Valley Resources and the Salvation Army team bringing together the necessary volunteers and financial resources," Courtney said. "We are grateful to all involved, especially to those in the community who have donated or volunteered their time so this much-needed service can return. We will continue to manage the efforts as necessary."

Dave Adams, one of those volunteers who has worked tirelessly for the homeless and the re-opening, said that fortunately there are only about five people now living on the streets of Madison. However, that number can change day-to-day and whether the shelter serves five or 15, some of the logistics remain the same.

"We'll need about six volunteers a night to provide a person to monitor the men, the women and the common area and we will need two six-hour shifts per night so that's six people," Adams said.

Eleven volunteers have cleared training and security checks at this time — enough to re-open the facility — but additional volunteers are needed to help share the load. He said the city and Salvation Army will most likely also look at hiring a paid seasonal employee to coordinate the program and make sure everything runs smoothly.

Madison's airport growth flying high as revenues grow

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Tucked in between fields of hay, soybeans and corn — far enough off the main road that a casual observer might not even know it's there — sits Madison Municipal Airport, one of the faster-growing operations in a city of 13,000 that is unique in that it has access to road, rail, water and air commerce.

And, it's all based on providing good service for good value.

With about 13,000 operations a year — an operation being a landing or takeoff — Madison's 5,000-foot runway may not be the busiest in the region, but Manager Brent Spry said what Madison Municipal (KIMS) lacks in operations it tries to make up for in overall business and quality of service. He's been building on that since taking over as manager in 2014 and the growth has accelerated in recent years.

Planes don't buzz around Madison's runway like bees to a hive and there are no commercial passenger flights, but for the most part, each flight into and out of the airport has a purpose, whether for the enjoyment of recreational pilots or to drop off or pick up a corporate client, deliver or ship a locally manufactured part throughout the United States and North America or refuel en route to other destinations.

Spry said he tries to run an efficient but user-friendly operation that meets the needs of dozens of local clients as well as hundreds of visitors annually, many of whom are repeat customers who choose Madison even though it may be a little bit out of their way.

In operation since 1964, Madison Municipal covers about 340 total acres — it has room to grow if necessary — and is home to several dozen locally owned or based aircraft, including a couple of corporate jets. But the airport sees many times more that number in visitors traveling to and from local events, businesses and industries or just stopping off for a less expensive refueling.

Although the airport serves several recreational fliers, the bulk of its operations are related to business where time is money and people spend money to make more money. Although

Holcomb praises Grote transition program for inmates

Courier staff report

INDIANAPOLIS — A training and employment program implemented at Grote Industries of Madison was highlighted Tuesday night by Gov. Eric Holcomb in his State of the State address in Indianapolis.

Through a partnership with Ivy Tech Community College and the Indiana Department of Correction, Grote provides workplace training and experience, as well as opportunities for permanent employment to women returning to the workforce.

In the address, Holcomb introduced both Grote President and CEO Dominic Grote and Amber Campbell, a Grote Industries worker who enrolled in the training program while completing a sentence at the women's prison at Madison. Both attended the address as guests of the governor.

Amber Campbell joined Grote in April 2019 and was promoted recently to a team leader on the company's second shift.

"Amber, on behalf of our state, we thank you for your hard work," Holcomb said. "And Dominic, we thank you for giving her that shot."

More on the State of the State address, Page A2

"For CEO Dominic Grote, it's a win/win," Holcomb said. " Along with Amber, he has another employee getting a degree to get a better job at Grote and two others pursuing degrees at Ivy Tech to become engineers — and, he hopes, stay with the company."

While emphasizing the personal investment that Campbell and other program graduates make in their own lives, Grote noted in a company news release Wednesday that "These are talented people who lost their way and are working hard to get back on the right path. The benefits of their commitment go beyond their own lives to benefit not only our company but our entire community."

Holcomb said in his address that the DOC has graduated more than 3,000 inmates in two years

Governor's State of State address

Holcomb touts economic progress in annual speech

By WHITNEY DOWNARD
(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

Entering the last year of his first term as governor, Eric Holcomb still had more items on his to-do list for 2020.

"I want Indiana to become known as 'A state that works for all,'" Holcomb said in his State of the State address at the Statehouse, adding two words to the Indiana Economic Development Corp.'s motto. "Where every citizen – no matter their background or age or who they love or whether they grew up here or arrived last week – has equal access and opportunity to go as far as they wish and are willing to work to get there."

Republican leaders have resisted addressing teacher pay in the 2020 short session, pushing the issue to next year's budget session. Holcomb asked Tuesday that lawmakers use surplus funds in next year's budget to pay down teacher pensions, freeing up future legislative funding for teacher pay.

Outside of the classroom, Holcomb said he aimed for 60% of adults to have post-secondary education, including technician certificates and two-year degrees.

"This is a huge progress and we won't overlook anyone who is aspiring to be successful," Holcomb said. Other educational initiatives included programs for Hoosiers with disabilities and incarcerated Hoosiers.

The annual speech came with several surprise announcements, such as the $400 million Fiat Chrysler Automobiles investment at its Kokomo facility for constructing a new engine.

According to the Indiana Economic Development Corp., the four-cylinder GMET4 engine will require a workforce of 1,000, populated by a combination of current employees and new hires. The company currently employs nearly 8,000 workers in the state.

The state will bring all its services for veterans into one facility in the spring, including the Veterans Administration, Disabled American Veterans, the Indiana Veterans Initiative, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion. More details were not immediately released.

Holcomb repeated his push for a handsfree device driving bill, similar to 21 other states, that would limit the types of electronics Hoosiers use on the road.

"Distracted driving increases the risk of a crash by more than three-and-a-half times and is a leading killer of teenagers in our country," Holcomb said. "This is unacceptable and avoidable."

Despite the governor's enthusiasm for the bill, Republican lawmakers don't seem as keen to pass the bill in the 2020 session.

"We have some folks who are very supportive and some on the more libertarian side," House Speaker Brian Bosma, R-Indianapolis, said. "It will be a robust discussion and I don't know where we're going to land yet."

Democratic leaders criticized Holcomb for what he excluded from the speech, including an immediate pay increase for teachers this year.

"I appreciate the plan he's putting forth next year, not this year," Sen. Tim Lanane, D-Anderson, said, noting a similar bill filed by Sen. Karen Tallian, D-Portage, this session. "We said, 'Let's do it this year. We can do it this year.'" "Kids coming out of high school aren't even going into the [teaching] profession," Rep. Phil GiaQuinta, D-Fort Wayne, said. "Because of, not only the pay, but I think, more importantly, what we've done in the state by taking the creativity out of teaching, the fun out of teaching."

Lanane and GiaQuinta said legislators were running out of time to address redistricting before the 2020 census results and hadn't proposed any legislation to reduce health care costs, just plans to make costs more transparent.

Democratic opponent for governor Woody Myers expanded beyond the struggles of Indiana's educators in his criticism.

"Teachers are not the only ones struggling in our state. Like teachers, too many of our lower-income Hoosiers are forced to work multiple jobs to make ends meet," Myers said in an emailed statement. "The state must do more to ensure Hoosiers can make a living wage and stand ready to help those displaced from their careers."

Health advocates call for action to stem youth E-cig use

Kentucky

FRANKFORT— A group called the Coalition for a Smoke-Free Tomorrow urged Kentucky lawmakers Tuesday to impose an excise tax on the sale of E-cigarettes. The bill would tax E-cigarettes at 27.5% of their wholesale price, which is equivalent to the state's $1.10-per-pack tax on cigarettes. The measure would generate an estimated $34 million in its first year. The coalition also called for increased state funding for tobacco prevention and cessation efforts. The statehouse rally featured students, health advocates and business leaders. State health officials last week announced Kentucky's first probable vaping-related death. The person who died was a male in his late 20s, officials said.

University of Kentucky food systems summit

FRANKFORT — A summit to promote local and sustainable food systems is planned for next month. The second annual Kentucky Local Food Systems Summit will be Feb. 26 at the University of Kentucky's Gatton Student Center. Participants will learn about issues including agricultural research, market development, community nutrition and public policy. "Efforts like this one allow important conversations to take place between members of the Commonwealth's agricultural and culinary industries," said Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles. "These conversations help grow our economy, create jobs, and support Kentucky's farm families." Lilian Brislen, executive director of The Food Connection, said she hopes the summit will help develop strategies for a sustainable food system.

Survey finds 2019 food prices up

LOUISVILLE — The cost of a variety of foods showed a slight increase over the past year, with most items fluctuating during the fourth quarter, the Kentucky Farm Bureau said. The Farm Bureau's Marketbasket Survey showed an increase in the average overall cost of food during three of the four quarters in 2019, ending the year with an average of $118.74. The price remains lower than the costs seen in 2014-2016, even though there have been slight overall increases in recent years, the Farm Bureau. The organization conducts its Marketbasket Survey four times annually, checking prices of 40 basic food items throughout Kentucky. The numbers are averaged into six categories: beef, pork, poultry, dairy, fruits and vegetables, and grains. National results from the Consumer Price Index report showed a similar slight increase in overall food prices throughout 2019, the release said. Fourth-quarter prices were mixed, the release said. Beef and poultry increases were likely due to seasonal demand, while other items remained somewhat steady. The largest decline was in grains, at 3.92%, the release said.

Clinic given OK to seek abortion license

LOUISVILLE — Officials are inviting a Planned Parenthood clinic to apply for a license to perform abortions after it was denied by former Gov. Matt Bevin's administration. If a license is approved for the Louisville clinic, it would become only the second abortion provider in the state. Bevin, a staunchly anti-abortion Republican, had ordered abortions halted at the downtown Louisville facility after learning early in his term as governor in 2016 that it was performing the procedure. The two sides had battled in court since then. Bevin lost his re-election bid to Democrat Andy Beshear in November, and Beshear, who supports abortion rights, took office Dec. 10. A letter sent from the state Cabinet for Health and Family Services on Jan. 3 to the Planned Parenthood clinic said the state was rescinding its decision to deny an application to provide abortions. The cabinet's letter said Planned Parenthood had complied with requirements to begin operation back in late 2015, meaning the abortions performed during a two-month period while Bevin was in office were not in violation of state law. The letter said that if a new license is approved, the clinic would be subject to an unannounced inspection by state officials within three months. Bevin and the Republican-controlled General Assembly had moved in recent years to enact restrictions on abortions, including passing a law requiring doctors to perform ultrasounds and show fetal images to patients prior to abortions. A federal appeals court upheld that law in June. After Planned Parenthood stopped providing abortions in 2016, the EMW clinic in Louisville became the state's only provider.

STATE BRIEFS

3rd horse rescue where 20 others were killed

PRESTONSBURG — A third horse has been rescued from a strip mine site where 20 horses were found fatally shot. The filly was captured by Dumas Rescue on Saturday and taken to the Kentucky Humane Society, news outlets reported. The horse is believed to be the daughter of the pregnant mare and sister to the colt who was rescued in late December. In a six-day span, 20 horses were found dead along U.S. 23 near the Floyd-Pike County line in the eastern part of the state. Tonya Conn with Dumas Rescue has said that the dead horses were scattered over a large area and it appears they had been hunted. Authorities said some of the horses were young and some were pregnant. Kentucky Humane Society President Lori Redmon said there are three additional surviving horses near the strip mine. Dumas Rescue tried to capture them on Saturday but the horses were spooked when someone shot an automatic rifle in the distance, Redmon said. There is now a $23,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of anyone responsible for shooting the horses.

Miners still block coal shipment

PIKEVILLE — About a dozen coal miners remained on train tracks Tuesday, saying they haven't been paid for producing the coal in the train cars. The tracks lead from Quest Energy in Pike County. American Resources Corp., which owns Quest, told news outlets that the miners will all be paid. The company disputed miners' claims that they haven't been paid since Dec. 16. American Resources said it owes some miners for eight days of work and some for one day. The company blamed a "temporary blip" in the coal market. The miners said they won't return to work until their paychecks are in their bank accounts. "I'm starving. I about lost everything I own and I'm tired of it," Quest miner Dustin Maynard told WYMT-TV. "Somebody's gotta stand up to these guys and I guess it's us." Donations arrived within hours of the protest starting Monday. People brought pizza, water and firewood. Miners last summer in Harlan County staged a similar protest when Blackjewel filed bankruptcy. The miners eventually were given a deal to be paid and let the train pass.

Not guilty murder plea in dog attack

CONWAY — A woman who authorities say released her pit bull on a man has pleaded not guilty to murder in his death. Melissa Wolke, 38, pleaded not guilty Monday to all charges including murder, alcohol intoxication, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, news outlets reported. Rockcastle County Coroner Marvin Owens told news outlets he was called to a Conway home Friday for a reported fatal dog attack. Wolke was found on top of Donald Abner, 55, punching him and telling her pit bull to attack him, Kentucky State Police said. Police told Wolke to stand down but she refused. An arrest document said a stunned gun was used on the woman and her dog. But when the pit bull ran toward one of the officers, the dog was fatally shot, police said. Trooper Scottie Pennington previously said Abner had dog bites on his face and head. Owens said Abner was dead at the scene. An autopsy is being performed on the man to confirm a cause of death. The dog's remains also will be examiend to determine if the animal had rabies. Bail was denied Monday because the coroner's report was not finished.

• Madison's airport

Madison may never see commercial passenger flights — the passenger demand is just not high enough to foot the high costs of such operations — the strip does see quite a few charter flights with planes and helicopters transporting clients to businesses and industries in Madison and the surrounding region, including Belterra Resort and Casino, Kentucky Speedway and the long string of factories that line the Ohio River in Carroll and Gallatin counties in Kentucky.

The airport's 75-foot-wide runway will accommodate any plane or helicopter up to 75,000 pounds — roughly a Gulfstream G550, a 96-foot-long by 93-foot-wide jet 25 feet tall and capable of seating up 19 passengers.

Since Spry took over, and especially in recent years, Madison has more than doubled its fuel sales and established business relationships with new corporate clients and the military while continuing to service the commercial and recreational pilots, businesses and industries that have long called Madison Municipal home.

Unlike some airports that fuel planes by truck, requiring an attendant and vehicle and those additional operational expenses, Madison does it through a self-serve fuel farm that Spry has been able grow from about 40,000 gallons in 2018 to 116,000 gallons in 2019 by switching suppliers and reaching out to more potential customers through corporate accounts and credit card sales right at the pump.

Spry explained that to sell fuel to corporate jets and the military, Madison needed a way to accommodate the ways those organizations pay for fuel and discounts they negotiate as a volume buyer. Once the airport was able to do that, fuel sales expanded quickly. He said the airport's 10,000-gallon tanks hold about 8,500 gallons of usable fuel, allowing for fuel expansion, and Madison orders refills about twice a month during its peak season from April to October.

That volume allows Madison to make a profit while still offering fuel for a dollar or more per gallon less than other area airports and makes Madison a fueling oasis for flights otherwise bound for other locations. The greater volume of business also keeps costs lower for local fliers and some of the pilots who visit — especially those on recreational flights — end up stopping over to enjoy other things Madison has to offer once they see the city from the air and learn more about Madison in the pilots' lounge at the terminal building on site.

Many of the pilots and charter passengers who visit Madison often return to spend even more time or visit one of the many festivals the city has to offer.

This week the self-serve pumps at Madison were offering both Jet A — fuel for jet aircraft — at $4.15 a gallon and 100 low lead — fuel for piston-powered aircraft — at $4.05 a gallon and that's some of the best prices in the region. The fact that Madison has no landing fees and no tie-down fees makes it a destination where pilots can save big bucks just by filling up here.

Spry said while the fuel farm is self-serve, he and other airport workers often assist customers and welcome them to Madison Municipal and the city. Although the pilots' lounge has free coffee, a vending machine and a microwave, there is no food service. However, Madison airport has a courtesy car on site that visitors can use free locally to go to lunch or shop locally. "We have people who just want to go into town to grab something to eat, shop locally or look around," Spry said.

The field is bounded by County Road 375 West on the east and North Grange Hall Road and North 450 West on the west with West Chicken Run Road bordering to the north and West Interstate Block Road to the south. However, one of the busiest intersections in Jefferson County at State Roads 256 and 56 is just 2 miles away.

The draw for corporate customers comes down to convenience and cost. Corporate jets that stop to refuel at Madison often spend $3,000 to $4,000 on fuel alone, so the dollar or more savings per gallon can add up. Spry said the higher fuel costs at airports in Louisville, for instance, plus the landing and takeoff fees make Madison a destination of value to both corporate and military traffic.

He said the airport has been able to help control costs by applying for and receiving federal grants for improvements like a runway extension, better lighting and a new $1.2 million wildlife fence that is now being installed to make the area safer from deer, coyotes and other animals that have been known to roam the grounds from time to time.

Spry said the previous fence was too short to properly secure the area but that he and his staff kept a close watch with the numerous surveillance cameras on and around the property to alert incoming pilots or those preparing to take off of any problems. Once the new fence is completed sometime this spring, the property will be more secure, but Spry said the staff will continue to monitor camera feeds to provide the safest situation possible for users.

He said accepting federal grants to improve the airport always comes with a catch, but it's one he doesn't likely see to be an issue.

"Every time you accept a grant you have to agree to keep the airport open for at least another 20 years," Spry said. "To get that money you have to make a commitment but we're committed to being here from now on and if we didn't get the grants, somebody else would."

Madison Municipal could face more competition in the future. New airports are developed from time to time and last year's announcement that $9 million has been budgeted to build a rural airport in Gallatin County, Kentucky, which is closer to many of the industries and attractions Madison airport now serves, could impact traffic here.

However, Spry noted, that $9 million doesn't buy much airport considering that a fence can cost more than $1 million and runway taxi lights alone another half-million.

The investment at Madison over the last 45 years far exceeds what a basic startup airport could offer.

"They say they will be operational in three years but it could be more like five years," Spry said. "Nine million dollars is not going to provide a lot of amenities and if you don't have amenities and service you may not get as much use. It's going to be an unproven airport for some time."

At the same time, if Madison loses business going to and from the industries, Kentucky Speedway and the casino, that loss will be felt.

That's why Spry is doing everything he can to make Madison the kind of place people want to continue to use.

Part of that includes reintroducing a flight school at the airport after a number of years without local pilot training.

Spry said about a dozen students are taking flight lessons now and a training plane has been located at the airport for convenience.

Madison is also working to establish a flight club at the airport where members pay an annual fee to cover the purchase/lease, maintenance and insurance on a plane or planes with members then sharing use the aircraft essentially for fuel and operating costs such as airport fees.

Spry said getting more people involved in flying and with better access to safe, well-maintained planes is important to future growth.

On nights when the shelter is open, check-in will begin at 7 p.m. with visitors receiving a meal at 7:30 p.m. Visitors will be allowed to come and go until 10 p.m. at which time the doors will be locked with no one else allowed in and anyone who leaves not allowed to re-enter. Checkout time is 7 a.m. the next morning so the Salvation Army can use the room to serve its regular daily meal Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Shelter visitors must register on arrival with their name, date of birth, gender, race, and a phone number and address if they have one. They must also list any medical conditions, allergies and medications they take as well as list the number of an emergency contact.

Some of that data is to ensure the safety of guests and staff and some will be collected for statistical purposes.

There also will be other rules for staying at the shelter. Guests must respect everyone and no alcohol, drugs, vaping or smoking will be allowed on premises, although guests may smoke outside until when doors are closed and locked at 10 p.m. No weapons will be allowed on premises, no sexual activity will be tolerated and guests should be respectful in their language and refrain from the use of profanity.

Caregivers are responsible for their children at all times and care cannot be transferred to another guest, staff member or volunteer. A quiet time will be observed from 10 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. in the sleep rooms and those who cannot sleep will be asked to use a designated common area when available to relax and chat quietly. If a problem arises, guests should contact a staff person or volunteer to help resolve the issue. Sleeping areas, bathrooms and common areas should be kept clean and tidy and the Salvation Army is not responsible for lost or stolen items.

In addition, no unauthorized pictures or selfies can be taken in the shelter. Guests must remain in areas designated for winter shelter.

Each guest will be provided with a cot and a newly-sealed sanitary kit containing a pillow, pillowcase, sheet and blanket. Materials in the kit, which cost about $20 each, will be collected and thrown away daily with a new kit issued the next night. Salvation Army Case Manager Carol Marsh said using the kits eliminates the need to do laundry — the Salvation army does not have washers and dryers on site — and helps control the spread of lice and bed bugs.

In the past, the local center had accommodated the city's homeless as part of its overall mission, collecting its own donations and organizing the staff. Marsh said that operation ran contrary to how the Salvation Army conducts shelters in other areas because most of those shelters are dedicated facilities rather than multipurpose facilities like Madison's, which serves as church, thrift store, dentist office, counseling agency and serves daily meals and provides other outreach programs.

Marsh said it is likely that some of the homeless people who will stay at the shelter already receive meals and other services there but the legal and security issues of having people in the building all night meant the facility needed additional staffing to make sure guests, staff and the facility were a safe environment.

"Most of these people we already know and they are like part of your family," Marsh said. "They already eat breakfast here and end-of-month meals. They are our folks."

Until Saturday's re-opening at the Salvation Army, the City of Madison will continue to use the restroom facility at Bicentennial Park as a warming shelter from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. when temperatures are forecast to be 32 degrees or lower.

and that the state recidivism rate has dropped 4%.

But, he also issued a new challenge.

"By 2022, I want 500 returning citizens annually to have validated job opportunities waiting for them before they walk out of prison, and 3,000 more formerly incarcerated individuals in jobs within five months of their release," Holcomb said. "That's why I've proposed to redesign the way we provide education credit to inmates so they have more incentive to holistically engage in addiction recovery treatment, mental health management and vocational development. So they can re-enter our communities as engaged neighbors, forever removed from the criminal justice system."

Grote explained in the company's news release that Ivy Tech approached the company in late 2018 about partnering in the community college's Manufacturing Skills program.

Part of that program includes training in production and materials handling through the Indiana Department of Correction. The eight-week course trains women from Madison Women's Correctional Facility for frontline production roles and prepares them for life outside the facility. Grote Industries has hired eight graduates in the past year and has five in its workforce today.

"The collaboration between Ivy Tech, the Indiana Department of Correction and our team at Grote has been excellent," Grote said. "Each of our objectives are aligned and mutually beneficial. We get trained employees to help continue our growth, the community gains contributing residents, and these young women earn the opportunity to get back on the path to self-sufficiency and a healthy life."

While they finish their prison sentences, the women are employed through a work-release program. They also fully participate at Grote in the company and its culture, including employee organizations like the company's running club and volunteering along with co-workers at community events.

Campbell said the training she received "gave me the confidence that I can do anything as long as I work for it."

Grote Industries said in its news release that Campbell's success also means the company has a committed and talented rising leader who can contribute to the company's success for years to come.

Grote Industries engineers and manufactures LED and incandescent lamps, mirrors, wiring systems, connections, and reflective accessories for trucks, trailers, farm and construction equipment, fire, rescue, and armored vehicles. For 119 years, Grote, a family-owned company, has provided state-of-the-art solutions for OEM and aftermarket customers across the globe. Grote Industries serves international customers from facilities in Canada, Mexico, Europe and Asia but its headquarters is in Madison.

Charlie's Beat

Drew Eades is making his musical dream come true

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Drew Eades is not a musician, and he doesn't own a music venue or bar. But he's been personally making a huge impact on our local music scene in the last few months, and we've only seen the tip of the iceberg.

Drew is the promoter and booking agent for the Roostertail Music Series, currently with six country music shows scheduled at Red Bicycle Hall in the coming months. His first show, Ward Davis with Josh Morningstar, was standing room only two nights in a row back in November.

"I'm super passionate about music," Drew said. "It's nothing for me to jump in the car every weekend and drive several hours to see my favorite acts. I go to the Egyptian Room and Dukes in Indy, the Bluebird in Bloomington, Bogarts in Cincy and Manchester Hall in Lexington.

"My mom always listened to what I call 'good country', people like Alan Jackson, Dwight Yoakam and Brad Paisley. But somewhere along the line I started to seek out the less poppy stuff. Outlaw country and American/Southern rock.

"Everything changed for me when I went to a Cody Jinks show with Ward Davis opening. It blew me away. I thought to myself, I want to bring this kind of quality show to Madison. But I didn't know where to start or how to make it happen.

"So I contacted Brent Turner, the music chairman of the Roostertail Festival. He told me it was totally possible, and he showed me how. We tried for Cody Jinks and couldn't quite make it happen, but I was able to get Ward Davis. What an amazing experience that was.

"I mean, here I am, my first time promoting a show, and I'm hanging out with Ward Davis and his band. That was one hundred percent a dream come true for me. It's been a whirlwind since then, talking to agents, negotiating contracts and show dates. It's a lot of work, but it's super rewarding.

"I'm really proud of the bands we have lined up for the Roostertail Series. Rye Davis is coming up this Friday with two other great acts. Two weeks later we have a huge talent, Chis Knight, coming on Jan. 31. Jackopierce is the next night on Feb 1.

Drew Eades

"Then on Feb. 14 we have Sunny Sweeney, and we'll also be announcing the Roostertail Festival lineup that night, so mark your calendar for that one.

"I feel like the music we're bringing in is real life stuff, real stories told by genuine talent. Maybe their names aren't famous yet, and I say yet, because some of them are on the way to the big time. But their music is as good or better than you'll hear on the radio or anywhere.

"If you like country music, just give these Roostertail shows a try. I guarantee you're going to discover some new favorite bands. The tickets are cheap, especially compared to big city shows, and you don't have to drive for hours. It's right here.

"Cody Ikerd was here a few weeks ago and he said Red Bicycle Hall is the best music hall he's ever played in. This is from a guy who's played a lot of places all over the region. There's a level of intimacy and engagement with the artists that you can't get at the bigger venues.

"I see Madison becoming this hub for great music, attracting not just local fans but from the nearby cities. My goal is to sell out shows every weekend. The music is that good. We just need to build a following.

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

If you are a country music fan you are in luck. Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Red Bicycle Hall is a triple bill of great live country talent. Tickets are available at redbicyclehall.com or at the door. You'll see in the "Up & Coming" section of the calendar I've listed the Jan. 25 show at Rembrandts. Last time La Petite Musique brought their amazing brand of French music to town it was a packed house. Reserve a table soon! And finally, tickets just went on sale for the Crossroads Acoustic Fest over in Seymour on April 23-25. This cool festival is a lot like the Mad Hop event we had back in November. Lineup and tickets are at crossroadsacousticfest.com.

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

For 'Jeopardy' fans, Jennings the greatest

NEW YORK (AP) — Being bold paid off for new "Jeopardy!" mega-champion Ken Jennings, while it didn't for his opponents.

Jennings won his third match in the "Jeopardy!" "Greatest of all Time" contest televised Tuesday, an event that's been a prime-time hit for ABC. He pocketed $1 million by dispatching James Holzhauer, who won one match, and Brad Rutter, who came up empty.

The gamesmanship between the three men considered the most-accomplished and best-known in the show's modern history proved entertaining while containing all the tension of a major sporting match.

Jennings took a strong lead in the first game of Tuesday's match by borrowing a strategy popularized by Holzhauer, twice betting all of his points on a Daily Double and winning. He signaled his intention by imitating the gesture of a poker player pushing all of his chips to the center of the table.

In a "Final Jeopardy" question about Greece, Jennings bet all 32,800 of his points on the clue: "This area of Greece, home to Pan, is synonymous with a rural paradise; it's a setting for Vergil's shepherd poems the 'Ecologues.' He correctly answered, "What is Arcadia?"

Holzhauer was leading in the second game of the match, where the "Final Jeopardy" question asked the competitors to identify the non-title character in a Shakespearean tragedy with the most speeches.

Jennings correctly answered, "Who is Iago?" But he bet none of his points.

That left an opening for Holzhauer to take the match if he bet all of his points and got it right. He bet all of his points, but answered, "Who is Horatio?"

At the end, Hozhauer and Rutter hoisted Jennings on their shoulders in honor. The losers each took home $250,000.

It's hard not to imagine they'll play again sometime, given the show's success. But the night had a tinge of nostalgia and sadness as veteran host Alex Trebek fights pancreatic cancer.

The boys team recorded seven event wins and won 104-71 while the girls had one win but battled in a 111-64 loss.

"Just incredible! These kids just keep working and working and they are so inspiring," Madison coach Ashley Schutte said. "These ladies are growing each week and we are so incredibly proud of the way they represent"

SELLERSBURG — Silver Creek used red-hot shooting from behind the arc to pull away for a 70-55 win over Madison in girls basketball Tuesday in Sellersburg.

The Dragons connected on 12 of their 20 attempts from long range, a shooting display that was simply too much for Madison to match.

"There's not much we can do when they're 12-for-20 from the 3-point line," Madison coach Sonja Bowyer said. "They're a great team and they were hitting today. They probably could have drop-kicked it backwards and it would have gone in. But we can't play like we did in the first half against a team like that. We were able to play four quarters against Brownstown (last week) and we only played two quarters today. That's something we've got to get better at."

Madison stunned a 14-win Brownstown squad on the road last week and was hoping to do the same against Silver Creek, which came into the game with a 13-3 record and ranked ninth in Class 3A.

The Cubs did their best to hang with the Dragons, trailing only 10-9 late in the first quarter but a quick 10-0 run staked Silver Creek to a 20-9 lead and the Dragons never looked back.

The catalyst for the Dragon run was outside shooting. Silver Creek hit only one trey in the first quarter but banged in five in the second to build a 37-21 lead by halftime.

A comeback of that size against an opponent like Silver Creek is nearly impossible but the Cubs came close to getting back into the game. After the Dragons pushed the lead to 22 (52-30) in the third quarter — on three more 3-pointers — Madison answered with a 9-0 run to pull within 13 points before Creek closed the quarter with three-straight points.

Madison again chipped away and got the margin down to 12 (63-51) with 4:33 to go and had the ball, but the Cubs could never get the margin into single digits. Silver Creek then closed the game on a 7-4 run.

For Bowyer, the key was the way her team finished and she hopes to build on those final two quarters as the Cubs come down the stretch toward sectional.

"We want to look at the positives and one of the biggest positives was that we won the second half by one point," Bowyer said. "We proved that we can play with teams like this. We just need to get better at putting together four solid quarters."

Six-foot-1 junior all-star candidate Jade Nutley was nearly unstoppable in the second half for Madison, scoring 24 points and grabbing eight rebounds to lead the team. Senior Paige Young added 15 points to the Cubs' effort.

Alana Stiverson hit four 3-pointers and scored 22 points to lead Silver Creek. Emme Rooney hit a pair of treys and scored 14, Kynidi Stiverson had 13 points and Jaclyn Emly had 10. Kynidi Stiverson came close to recording a triple-double by adding 13 rebounds and nine assists. She also had five steals.

Both teams shot over 50% from

TC girls beat Iroquois, fall at Owen

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Trimble County girls basketball picked up a road win over Iroquois Monday but lost at home to Owen County Tuesday.

The Raiders broke a three-game losing streak with the 67-33 win over Iroquis. Shelby Wilcoxson had 21 points, Colby O'Connor scored 13 and Abby Ponder and Emma Ginn each added eight.

Trimble dropped a 66-27 decision to Owen on Tuesday. Wilcoxson scored 13 points and Ponder had eight for the Raiders.

Boys fall to Iroquois

The Trimble County boys also faced Iroquois on Monday, falling 84-60. Dylan Jennings had 17 points for the Raiders, Reece Webster had 13 points and Tate Ogburn scored 11.

Trimble's girls (5-10, 1-1 North Central Kentucky Conference) host Eminence Saturday and travel to Spencer County on Monday.

The Trimble boys (2-13) were to visit Eminence Wednesday and Henry County Friday. The Raiders then host Gallatin County on Tuesday.

FBS record for touchdown passes among feats by LSU QB Burrow

By ERIC OLSON
AP College Football Writer

Joe Burrow won the Heisman Trophy, the national championship and set the Football Bowl Subdivision record for touchdown passes in a season.

It probably won't bother him that Anthony Gordon was the nation's leading passer for a Washington State offense that has produced the most yards through the air in four of the last six seasons.

Gordon averaged 429.2 yards per game for Mike Leach, now the coach at Mississippi State. The caveat: Gordon threw 160 more passes than Burrow, who averaged 378.1 yards per game.

Burrow, the ninth quarterback and 16th player to win the Heisman and national title in the same season, ended the season with 60 TD passes against just six interceptions. Twelve scoring passes came in the College Football Playoff. His total broke the FBS record of 58 by Hawaii's Colt Brennan in 2006.

Burrow went into the championship game against Clemson on track to set the FBS season completion record. He just missed bettering Colt McCoy's 76.7% rate for Texas in 2008. Burrow finished at 76.2%.

Oklahoma's Jalen Hurts edged him out for first in yards per attempt, 11.3 to 10.8. Burrow, at 201.97, was the only quarterback with a passer rating higher than 200.

CHOO CHOO CHUBA

Chuba Hubbard won the national rushing title, and he announced Monday he'll return to Oklahoma State to defend it. With 2,094 yards, he was among four players over 2,000. His nation-leading 161.1 average on a nation-high 328 carries edged out Navy's Malcolm Perry (155.2).

Perry ran for a school bowl-record 213 yards in a 20-17 Liberty Bowl win over Kansas State, and his 2,017 rushing yards were most by a quarterback in FBS history. Perry led the nation with 26 runs of 20 yards or longer.

CHASE TO THE TOP

Ja'Marr Chase's third 200-yard game of the season pushed him into a virtual tie with Arkansas State's Omar Bayless for top receiver.

Chase, the Biletnikoff Award winner for LSU, caught nine balls for 221 yards and two touchdowns against Clemson. That increased his average to 127.1. Bayless averaged 127.2 after a huge performance against Florida International in the final regular-season game.

TOP OFFENSES

No surprise, LSU was the top overall offensive team. The Tigers averaged national highs of 568.4 yards and 48.4 points and were second with 401.6 passing yards per game.

Central Florida was second in total offense (540.5 ypg) and Oklahoma (537.6) moved past Clemson (528.7) for second. Clemson's 394 yards against LSU were its fewest since September.

Alabama (47.2 ppg) and Ohio State (46.9) followed LSU in scoring offense. Washington State was just ahead of LSU in passing yards per game (437.2).

The military academies finished 1-2-3 in rushing — Navy (360.5 ypg), Air Force (298.5) and Army (297.1).

TOP DEFENSES

Total defense leaders were Ohio State (259.7 ypg), Utah (269.2), Georgia (275.7), which was No. 1 in two of the four major defensive categories.

The Bulldogs finished with the top scoring defense after Clemson gave up 42 points to LSU, the most it has surrendered since 2016. Georgia allowed 12.6 points per game, just ahead of San Diego State (12.7). Clemson ended up third with an average of 13.5.

The Bulldogs were first in rushing defense (74.6 ypg) ahead of San Diego State (75.4) and Utah (81.8).

Clemson had the top pass defense, as measured by yards allowed, entering Monday. Clemson, after allowing 463 to LSU, had its average go from 151.5 yards per game to 172.3, ranking fourth behind Ohio State (156), Kentucky (167.8) and Notre Dame (168.5).

FINAL AP Top 25 Poll

The Associated Press began its college football poll on Oct. 19, 1936, and it is now the longest-running poll of those that award national titles at the end of the season. The preseason poll was started in 1950. A panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters from around the country votes on the poll weekly.

Cubs' Kelsey Bilz to wrestle at state

sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison sophomore Kelsey Bilz will try to make history this weekend when she competes in the Indiana Wrestling Coaches Association Girls Wrestling State Championships in Kokomo.

Bilz recorded three pins en route to the finals while finishing second at the Edgewood Regional.

"Kelsey is a trailblazer. The IHSAA will eventually sanction girls wrestling as their own sport and when they do Kelsey will be known as one of the best to wear a Madison singlet," Madison coach Tyson Skinner said. "Kelsey had the finals match in hand with a one-point lead with 25 seconds left and got caught. That girl was No. 3 in the state and I know Kelsey can beat her."

The state finals will begin on Friday and run through Saturday.

Public Notice Des. No. 1600669
The Indiana Department of Transportation is planning to undertake a drainage improvement project funded in part by the Federal Highway Administration. The project is located at the intersection of State Road 56 and Ferry Street on the east side of the City of Madison, Jefferson County, Indiana. Under the preferred alternative, the proposed project would involve partially replacing the existing structure on altered alignment. The project is approximately 0.09 mile long. A total of approximately 0.01 acre of permanent and 0.03 acre of temporary right-of-way acquisition and an approximately 0.12 acre drainage easement are anticipated. Properties listed in or eligible for the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) located within the Area of Potential Effects (APE) include the Madison Historic District and the Madison Historic Landmark District. The proposed action impacts properties listed in or eligible for the NRHP. The Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT), on behalf of the FHWA, has issued a "No Adverse Effect" finding for the project because the project will not diminish the integrity of the characteristics that qualify the historic properties within the APE for inclusion in the NRHP. In accordance with the National Historic Preservation Act, the views of the public are being sought regarding the effect of the proposed project on the historic elements as per 36 CFR 800.2(d), 800.3(e) and 800.6(a)(4). Pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(d)(2), the documentation specified in 36 CFR 800.11(e) is available for inspection in the office of Butler, Fairman, & Seufert, Inc. Additionally, this documentation can be viewed electronically by accessing INDOT's Section 106 document posting website IN SCOPE at http://erms.indot.in.gov/Section106Documents. This documentation serves as the basis for the "No Adverse Effect" finding. The views of the public on this effect finding are being sought. Please reply with any comments to Elizabet Biggio, Butler, Fairman, & Seufert, Inc., 9450 Westfield Blvd. Suite 300, Indianapolis, IN 46240, 317-713-4615, ebiggio@bfsengr.com no later than February 15, 2020. In accordance with the "Americans with Disabilities Act", if you have a disability for which INDOT needs to provide accessibility to the document(s) such as interpreters or readers, please contact Rickie Clark at 317-232-6601 or rclark@indot.in.gov.

BRIDGE

THREE CLUBS MADE, BUT TWO CLUBS

Bridge can be a weird game at times. This deal occurred several decades ago in a match between Los Angeles and New York.

The New York North-South pair was allowed to make three clubs after uninspired defense.

At this table, West was Howard Schenken, and East was George Rapee. They won a combined total of seven world titles and 57 national championships.

First, though, sitting West, what would you have led against two clubs doubled?

Despite the doubleton club, Schenken preferred a takeout double to a two-diamond overcall. Rapee's one-spade advance looks cautious, especially as he was a passed hand. However, he did not like his weak spades and poorly placed heart honors. Today, an expert panel would surely favor one or two no-trump. When South continued with two clubs, Rapee doubled, understandably feeling that he had to do more.

Schenken did well, beginning with the ace and another trump. Then, when dummy played low at trick two, Rapee did brilliantly, playing his seven. If Rapee had won the trick, declarer would have unblocked an honor and used dummy's club nine as the entry for a heart finesse to make his contract.

When South continued with the spade king, Schenken ducked, knowing that if Rapee held five spades, he would have bid the suit twice.

Then Schenken, after taking the next trick with his spade ace, led a low diamond to his partner's king. Rapee cashed the club king before returning a diamond. Now declarer had to open up hearts from his hand. The defenders took one spade, two hearts, one diamond and two clubs for down one.

PETS OF THE WEEK

MAC

Mac is a good boy who can sit, give hugs and is trying to learn to shake. He is about one-and-a-half years old and still has a lot of energy. He is easily trainable since he loves treats. He would be a great family dog but does not like cats, so a home without them would be ideal.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has 6 dogs or puppies, and 20 cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jefferson-county.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter and call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

TAMARA

Tamara is a three-year-old domestic short hair who recently had a litter of kittens. While she is a good mother, she is ready for that to be her last litter. She is very loving and the perfect size for any lap.

Trying to get a handle on the past in dysfunctional family

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I am a 32-year-old married man with two children. I am trying to come to terms with my childhood. I grew up in a dysfunctional family, with an alcoholic father and a mother who had numerous affairs.

My elder brother, "Michael," was my world. He is only three years older than I am, but he practically raised me. He is the one who got me dressed and ready for school every morning, fed me, helped me with my homework, and tucked me in at night.

When I was 12 years old, my parents were going through a nasty divorce, and our home had become a war zone. I began to cling to my brother even more for comfort and safety.

I am ashamed to admit that our relationship became inappropriate and sexual in nature. To this day, I am not sure how it happened. It was never the same after that, and we never discussed what we had done.

About a year ago, I started to go to therapy to deal with my past. I still love Michael and want to try to understand what we did and how it happened.

I approached him about meeting with my therapist, but he reacted with anger. He claims to have no memory of any sexual encounters between us. He says it never happened and I must be imagining the whole thing.

As God is my witness, I remember what happened between us. I am not looking to accuse. I just want to understand. He has told every member of the family, including our divorced parents, that I am some kind of a pervert with bizarre, sick fantasies about him. Unfortunately, the family believes him.

My therapist says that there is little I can do to get Michael to admit to our past, that I need to reach peace of mind on my own. Is there anything you can suggest to get him to at least sit down with my therapist and me? — Recovering

Dear Recovering: I am so sorry for what you went through, but I'm very glad to hear that you're in therapy. I believe that your therapist is right — that there is little you can do to get Michael to admit the past. I encourage you to stay in therapy, as I believe you'll find that you have many pathways to recovery that don't require Michael's participation. Dear Annie: Though your answer to "Craving Kicks" was good, I think it was slightly incomplete.

She said she felt completely free, present and powerful when she scored her first soccer goal and was indeed recalling those feelings. But I submit that any endeavor also has the potential to give those exact feelings of freedom, power and presentness when it is pursued with practice and then success is achieved. It depends on the intensity of the pursuit, the amount of focus and practice, and how crowd-pleasing accomplishments are. It does not have to be soccer. Successful professionals in all sports and in other endeavors — music, acting, academics — experience the same power, freedom and presentness, which come from concentration and focus. This makes me wish I had practiced the piano more. — Kathy in Virginia Beach

Dear Kathy in Virginia Beach: I'm printing your letter because I agree completely. Great points. And it's never too late: Go tickle those ivories!
